

Marvis Aragon - Acoma

Marvis Aragon makes some of the most beautiful traditional Acoma pottery available today. He gathers and prepares the clay and paint materials. Then he hand builds his pottery using the coiling method. Marvis is fond of Anasazi pottery and uses the ancient shapes and motifs in his work. He has been receiving awards since the mid 1980's to the present at the prestigious Santa Fe Indian Market and in 1992 received Honorable Mention at Heard Museum Guild Indian Market.

Rebecca Lucario – Acoma

Rebecca Lucario comes from a long tradition of excellent Acoma potters. She has passed her knowledge of the traditional art on to her kids Amanda, Daniel and Duane. She's a real character and should you ever meet her on the street, you might never know she is one of the finest potters ever to come from Acoma.